Dog Massage

It's important to make notes after you massage your dog so that you have record of any spots that were hot, stiff and/or resistant to range of motion flexion and extension. Indicate any sensitive or ticklish areas as well. This will help you to remember your findings for the next time you massage your dog, and you will be able to monitor improvements or further deterioration.

Use the images below to indicate today's findings. If you prefer, you can use an image that best represents your breed or dog, or you can simply sketch your dog. As with people, be sure your dog drinks plenty of water following a massage.
